Study objectives

Sales and marketing professionals are always needed in global businesses regardless of economic trends. Sales and marketing are blurred, and combinations of human and result-oriented business competences are in demand. Sales jobs today are consultative, professional challenges that require solid business skills but also strong people-orientation. Hardworking sales professionals can count on a fast career track, versatile working days and a generous compensation for the strategic work they do, and for the added value they create for the company.

Business students learn to understand and analyse customer behaviour, and follow what goes on in global business. Learning takes place in real-life commissioned projects so students are trained to apply theory to challenges that are presented to them by both local and global companies. The multicultural learning environment on Porvoo Campus helps students develop their cultural sensitivity and understanding for constructive communication. Team work is practised on a daily basis as students work in team organisations, taking on different roles and responsibilities.

Students with Finnish educational background are expected to do a study period abroad. It can be exchange, work placement, project or thesis work. The programme itself offers a multicultural laboratory in daily work as the student body represents 40-50 different nationalities, and the staff is also multinational.

The language of instruction

The studies in international degree programmes on Porvoo Campus take place in English. International students can enjoy Finnish Areal Studies, and a choice of other areal studies. Finnish students are offered compulsory Swedish language studies as part of the Nordic Areal Studies, and a choice of other areal studies.

See the chapter on Areal studies below.

Study contents

The students on Porvoo Campus study and lead their project work in a unique and inspiring environment, where they are able to challenge themselves professionally, adopt various work life roles and develop people skills. The students learn to listen to and understand customer needs, to identify opportunities and create solutions together with work life partners and customers.

Bachelors of Business Administration have strong professional competences in the following fields:

- Business and Entrepreneurial competences
- Sales and Service competences
- Personal and Professional Growth competences

Business and Entrepreneurial competences teach the students to understand how businesses and organisations operate, how they are analysed, and how value is created. Graduates develop an entrepreneurial attitude and future orientation which help them run and develop a profitable business.

Sales and Service competences comprise the principles of practical sales and service, from providing customer service to creating value in relationships, as well as strategic sales management. Students manage the opportunities offered by digital media in marketing and sales in the global business environment.

Personal and Professional Growth competences mean both self-management and leadership skills that are practised by taking different roles in different projects. Students learn to apply leadership and development theories to enhance operations. The role of networking in business also becomes clear, as well as the need to constantly develop these networks

With the help of the above-mentioned knowledge, skills and methods the students acquire the most common meta-skills needed in the job market, project management, research and development, coaching, creative problem solving and innovation.

Choosing a field of specialisation

Towards the end of the first academic year the students choose their specialisation studies. Those take place in year two, both semesters.
